The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.

The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.

The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.

The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.

The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.

The reign of Jack Johnson in the early 1910s, he served another term as mayor.

The release of Napoleon Lamine at the end of 1914 forced a change in the name of the Flats. Johnson was a popular leader in Cleveland, and his arrest had a measurable impact on the team. The Cleveland Indians were soon the most popular team in the major leagues, gaining their first of ten world titles in 1914.

But Johnson's Cletrac School, opened in 1917, was involved in racing until it was closed in 1919. The federal government was interested in Johnson's track, which had been used for experiments with horses and mules during the Civil War.

The brownies, a youth group in 1917, was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1917. It was the first organization of its kind in the United States, and for years it served as a home-front responsibility.

The municipal bathhouses Mayor L. Davis and second- and third-choice voters could use for $0.25 a day. But the facilities were not enough to meet the demand, and by 1918, the bathhouses were closed.