Rich Amary of the Seattle Mariners wins the first pitch in Jacobs Field on April 4.

By Fred McGonagle

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.

Red, white and blue balloons soared into a cold, gray sky. The spirits of Clevelanders soared through the streets of Cleveland as they watched the Seattle Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox for first place. It was a cold, clear, blue morning, but everyone was ready for spring.

The Indians scored in the ninth inning to take the lead, 21-13, and the Mariners didn't let their fans down. They won the game, 24-13, and the season.