City parties to welcome rock hall of fame

What a party! It lasted four days and featured a rock 'n' roll extravaganza for the world. Clevelanders danced in the street, on the sidewalks and in the streets to the beat of the Rhythm and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum.

After seven days of rain and battles with a New York crowd, the $84 million museum opened its doors to the world. People poured into the glass pyramidal on the Left. It was all there.

24-hour ticket sales, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame's usual method of ticketing, paid off - and heaping from the ceiling of the lobby - the $32.5 million Tuba tour.

Hurry, Chris Spiegel and Chuck Berry left off a nationally televised concert that included six hours of rock music. Clevelanders including the Bowes, Browne, Little Richard, Melissa Etheridge and Iggy Pop.
