TROOPS REMOVED IN TRUCK STRIKE

Peace Believed Near at Minneapolis After Raids on Union's Offices.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Withdrawal of most of the national guard troops from Minneapolis, where they climaxed a week of military rule in the truck drivers' strike with two raids today on strike headquarters and the arrest of pickets, was ordered tonight by Adj. Gen. E. A. Walsh.

The order sending some 700 troops back to the four grounds and leaving a force of only 200 within the city proper, was suggested by some guard officers as the forerunner of actual lifting of military rule here.

Gen. Walsh's announcement followed a lengthy conference attended by Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Col. Elmer McDevitt, private marshal Grant Dunne, one of the strike leaders and himself.

Staff officers interpreted the governor's statement indicating strike leaders now under arrest would be released soon, also as strengthening belief the city would be restored completely to control of civil officers.

A checkup tonight showed 70 persons under military arrest. Of that number 28 were pickets arrested today by guardsmen roving the city on the alert for attacks on trucks and their drivers.

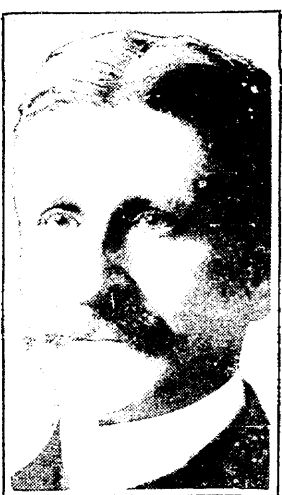

John Fisher, a picket wounded July 20 when strikers clashed with police, died in a hospital today to bring to two the number of men who have died in the present strike. Two men were killed in the May walkout.

Maschke Once Was Follower

Mayor Robert L. McKisson (left) was the politician to whose standard Maurice Maschke first attached himself in city campaigns. He served from 1885 to 1889, was defeated then by the

Howard in his recent biography of the late mayor, stopped the riot, for Kohler jumped on the platform, took charge of the proceedings until order was restored, when the Hanna men walked out of the hall and held a rump convention of their own in a hall across the street.

I recall that one of the delegates from my ward who took a prominent part in the proceedings was Mr. W. H. Boyd, now one of our leading lawyers, and then an assistant in the city law department.

That day I was re-elected a member of the county executive committee by the unanimous vote of the district, but when I went into the recorder's office Mr. Siegrist asked me to resign because of the continuous factional disturbance among the members of the committee. I was permitted to name my successor and I selected one of my chief lieutenants, Martin W. Sanders, then a practicing attorney.

Hanna Beat Off McKisson's Raid.

At the Republican caucus held Jan. 1 there were eleven absentees and, for some days, McKisson looked like the winner. But the senator was a very resourceful man. When the vote was taken on Jan. 12 the Republican lines had tightened. Some independents from Cincinnati deserted McKisson, and Mr. Hanna beat him by three votes.

I did not know Senator Hanna at that time, and my acquaintance with McKisson began to come to realize that this contest killed whatever chances the mayor might have had for any future political preferment, and brought about a split in the Republican party so deep as to take many years to heal.

Beat His Successor, Sanders, for Revolting.

So I settled down to my duties in the Court House; took complete charge of the conduct of the office; kept the books and the cash; transacted all the important business and found little time to talk politics with my friends. But this was not to be for long.

Early in the year 1899 the Hanna faction of the party induced Carlos M. Stone, a distinguished judge of the Common Pleas Court, to enter the primary contest for mayor against McKisson. The factional feeling was running high and a hot campaign was on.

One night, early in February I was at the old Star Theater when I rushed a messenger to tell me that Mayor McKisson wanted to see me right away. I went to the mayor's office and he told me that the newspapers the following morning would carry a statement from Martin Sanders indorsing Judge Stone for mayor. I was shocked and chagrined to find that the man I selected had so badly disappointed me. My lack of judgment in choosing him mortified me.

I told the mayor that I would prefer for the wars at once and would take complete charge of his interests in the district. After explaining the matter to my employer, I established headquarters in a downtown hotel, got busy, and when the primaries came on Feb. 21, McKisson carried every precinct in the district and we buried Mr. Sanders completely.

We kept up the campaign until the election in April when, although our district came through in good shape, John Farley beat McKisson by almost 2,000 votes.

I took the returns to the headquarters in the Forest City House and gave them to the mayor. Although everybody in the room was near broken, he kept up his smile and went down fighting.

The chickens had come home to roost. Most of Senator Hanna's friends voted against McKisson in retaliation for the fight that he made against Hanna in the Legislature. This defeat shook the great McKisson machine to its very foundation. It struggled and tottered along for some years, when it finally collapsed. Tomorrow — Barry, Jack McClain and Hopkins.

DEFIES MASCHKE TO CONTROL 11TH

Payne, at Lively Rally, Shouts "No!" to "Barry Is to Be Sheriff" Order.

Maurice Maschke's traditional control over the Republican colored vote in the city a bloc that has decided many an election apparently was challenged last night at a meeting of the Eleventh Ward Republican Club, presided over by Councilman Lawrence O. Payne, the ward leader.

The meeting held at 2508 Central Avenue S. E., held at 8:30 p. m. in support of Daniel E. Morgan, gubernatorial candidate at the Republican primaries, and Col. Herbert J. Twelvetree, candidate for sheriff at the Republican primaries.

Barry's order that he should be sheriff was met by a storm of protest. "No! No! No!" the crowd shouted. "No! No! No!" the crowd shouted. "No! No! No!" the crowd shouted.

"No! No! No!" the crowd shouted. "No! No! No!" the crowd shouted. "No! No! No!" the crowd shouted.

City Club Wits Bomb Maschke With Questions on Past

Maurice Maschke braved the lion's den and accepted a luncheon invitation at the Soviet table of the City Club yesterday. The luncheon was given in celebration of the first installment of Maschke's autobiography, which is appearing in the Plain Dealer.

The invitation was extended by Ed Doty, who was a Republican member of the Ohio Legislature five years before Maschke began his career in politics. Maschke, while a member of the City Club, had never before eaten at the Soviet table, the self-styled historic fringe of Cleveland.

"Are you going to tell about what you collected 9 cents a square yard in paving graft?" Peter Witt yelled.

"How do you know it was exactly 9 cents?" Maschke asked. "I'll let you tell the things I leave out. Anyway, I wasn't on the inner circles in those days."

Maschke revealed that in the 1923 election the Van Sweringen asked him to defeat Witt for the Council. "I told them we couldn't beat Witt, but that I would surround him so that his voice would be dimmed. And I did that," Maschke added.

Joseph Newman, poet laureate of the Soviet table, dashed off this stanza and read it to the crowd:

*My eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord!
Lo! Peter Witt and Maschke sit together at the board!
How peacefully the weary city folk may relax
While Peter turns Republican and Maschke Single Tax!*

Strikes for More Jobs. Capital Goods Dilemma. Two von Hindenburgs.

BY DALE COX.

We note that a larger percentage of the strikes around the country are being called in the capital goods industries. For many months employers in these industries have realized that they were the most vulnerable to labor attack, that they had more of their workmen unemployed, and that they were the most likely to be the target of the next depression because they had had so little business during the depression they could not meet labor halfway with wage and hour compromises like employers in the consumer goods field, where profits and employment have been much better.

The strike at the Kohler Co. in Wisconsin is a good illustration. The Kohler Co. is one of the country's large manufacturers of bath room equipment. Because there has been little building in the last several years there has been a tremendous backlog in its business. It tried to stagger its hours so as to give a little work to the greatest number of men.

But with labor militant as it is today, the demand was made a few weeks ago that Kohler reduce the hours of the men working regularly so as to re-employ some 60 per cent. more men at the same cost. Wages have risen about 60 per cent. as a result. The company declared that it could not possibly raise the prices of its bath room fixtures sufficiently to cover the increased labor costs. The strike resulted. Note that it was not called to procure for each man a higher total wage, but shorter hours and a higher hourly wage, intended to spread employment.

Goal of More Employment.

We could expect the beginning of really serious labor trouble if many strikes are called in the capital goods industries to force re-employment of more men. We think it is no exaggeration to say that the majority of these industries, hardest hit of all by depression, cannot increase their labor costs materially at the present time without bankruptcy. If they could improve their business first, they would have to hire more men as a result, but few are in a sufficiently strong financial position to pay out more for wages until they can receive more for what they make.

The only solution to the dilemma would be at Washington. If the administration's labor mediation agencies granted the workers more employment and higher wages, some other agency of the government would have to go out and provide the employers with enough business out of which to pay the higher wages. For wages can be paid only out of production. There are several strikes in the building trades around New York City, where much the same issue is involved as that in the Kohler dispute.

Striking Where It's Hard.

Maybe labor strategists should concentrate their present attention on the consumer goods industries, where higher wages may be passed along direct to the consumer, and go a little easy on the capital goods industries, which do not make things sold direct to consumers.

A very similar problem confronts the railroad industry. The government, through raising rail wages and ordering a new system of rail pensions, increases the costs of the railroads by several hundred millions annually. Many railroads are not even now earning their fixed charges. If the roads cannot earn the charges government imposes upon them there is only one way out—government ownership and operation of the roads, with the taxpayers meeting the annual deficit, as they do in Canada.

In Life and Propaganda.

George Creel, American director of propaganda during the World War, probably is too busy with his campaign for governor of California to pay much attention to the passing of Paul von Hindenburg, Germany's president. The finest thing that can be said about Hindenburg, as he crosses his last great line, is that the peoples of the Allied countries who were led by their war-time propaganda machines to hate him, grew to love and admire him when they came to know him as he really was.

Hindenburg, because he was the most successful of the German field marshals, and because he made the most serious thrust at Paris, was called the "Hindenburg line" and American aviators called all their stubborn mounts "von Hindenburg." Children were taught to cry at the mention of his name, and pulp orators listed him as the devil's agent on earth.

As He Really Was.

How grossly misrepresented he was. He was nothing more than a great patriot, a deeply devoted citizen of Germany, a plodding, methodical, military, with something of the tenacity of Ulysses S. Grant. Happily, the world came to know him after the war as a kindly old man, a doting grandfather, a splendid statesman, the firmest rock around which the mad Germany political seas whirled and tossed. Always he stood firm.

Germany, alas, has none other to take his place. There is no other figure to stand immovable amid all the mad crashing of political forces in central Europe. He was the best guarantee to the outside world of German integrity. A great force for stability has gone, and the prevailing instability in central Europe will now seem all the more menacing.

Hardin Grand Jury to Consider Charges Against 15 Men.

KENTON, O., Aug. 2—(AP)—With pickets in the Scioto onion fields more numerous than ever, Judge Hamilton Hoze today called a special session of the Hardin County grand jury to consider fifteen cases, mostly dealing with assault and shooting charges against strikers.

Meanwhile the Scioto Land Co., one of the major growers, distributed a $700 pay roll to 75 non-striking laborers.

Ashtabula Pays 82.6% of Taxes.

They Won With Maschke

Common Pleas Judge Thomas M. Kennedy (left), who died this year—shown here in the days when he was police judge—and Jack McClain (right), represented two of Maschke's early victories. Maschke forced Kennedy on the county judicial ticket over the hostility of the Hanna organization, and put McClain in the Council from the downtown district for several terms.

MASCHKE WON FOR M'CLAIN, KENNEDY

Mr. Schriest and Mr. Barry, was successful.

The administration of Mayor John Farley had become very unpopular. As the time for the spring primary in 1901 approached, there was a renewal of interest in Republican circles over the mayoralty nomination. From his former followers came a strong demand that M. K. Kistner run against the mayor. Kistner, an old politician, had been in the city for some time, but finally declined. Mr. W. J. Akers, who had been his former director of welfare, was induced to run as the candidate of the McKisson forces.

Elected Jack McClain to Council; Others "Faded."

The Hanna element presented Mr. H. Q. Sargent, then director of our city schools, and Mr. J. W. Hopkins, who, by this time, had scraped together a little faction of his own, also entered the race.

Some months before this I determined that there should be a change in the councilman from the district. In casting about for a candidate I thought of John D. McClain, who made a creditable showing in the primary the year before. He agreed to make the race. When I announced that I would support him the other candidates faded out of the picture and no one entered against him.

The primary came on Feb. 19, and Mr. Akers overpowered his two opponents in the city, carried our district by a heavy majority, and became the Republican candidate.

Realizing that heroic measures were necessary, Charles P. Salter, director of finance in Mayor Farley's cabinet, who liked to be known as the leader of the young Democracy, persuaded Tom L. Johnson to return to Cleveland from New York and run for mayor on the Democratic ticket.

Tom L. Johnson between 1880 and 1895, was a prominent figure in Cleveland life. He had been the owner of one of our street railway lines and from 1890 to 1894 he represented this city in the United States Congress. After his defeat in 1894 by Theodore E. Burton, he retired from politics, disposed of his street railway holdings, and moved to New York City.

In the campaign for the election, Mr. Johnson out-McKissoned McKisson. He promised to use his expert knowledge of the street railway business to secure 3-cent car fare for the people. He was a wonderful campaigner, one of the best I have ever heard of. He had a very interesting style of speaking and a most compelling and charming personality.

He was a difficult antagonist for any one. At the election on April 1, Mr. Johnson won by over 6,000 votes, but Mr. Akers carried our district by a good majority and Jack McClain was elected to the City Council.

On April 4, Mr. Johnson took charge of the office which he was to hold continuously for almost nine years thereafter. Jack McClain became my most faithful lieutenant and my most intimate personal friend in the district.

He was an unusual person, thoroughly reliable and trustworthy, to whom friendship was the most important thing. Besides, he had a knowledge of courage and feared no man. He was elected councilman five consecutive terms, served almost eleven years, when he voluntarily retired and moved to a farm in Michigan.

The defeat of Akers for mayor was almost a knockout for the McKisson machine. When the county convention met that summer the Hanna element was in control. I was elected unanimously as a member of the executive committee from my district, and when this committee organized Mr. W. R. Hopkins was elected chairman.

Hopkins: Councilman, Later a Hanna Man.

Mr. Hopkins had been elected to the City Council from the Newburg district in 1897 as a McKisson man. He introduced the street railway ordinances and took the lead in the fight for low fare in that body. I attended Council meetings frequently during that period and enjoyed listening to him. At this early stage in his career he gave promise of developing into the excellent speaker and skillful debater that everyone later knew him to be. In 1899 he declined to run for re-election, went over to the Hanna forces and was appointed chief deputy in the office of United States Marshal Chandler. Mr. Hopkins, United States Marshal Frank M. Chandler, Collector of Customs Charles F. Leach and Postmaster Charles Dew-stine were then the leaders of the Hanna forces. As all of them held federal offices through the grace of "Uncle Mark" Hanna, the newspapers always referred to them as "Federal Nephews."

Mayor Johnson rose rapidly in popular favor; built up a strong political organization. When election came in November, for the first time in many years every Democrat on the ticket carried Cuyahoga County and the important offices of county treasurer and county auditor passed into the control of the Democratic party.

The Rise of Judge Kennedy.

At the primary in May of the following year, 1902, I was elected a member of the Republican committee from the Second Ward, where I was then living. Early in 1902 the Legislature passed an act which created four additional common pleas judges for this county and a convention was held May 24 to nominate the four Republican candidates for judge. At that time judges were nominated and elected in the same way as were candidates for other offices running on the party ticket.

Many of the friends of Police Judge Thomas M. Kennedy were anxious that he be elevated to one of the common pleas judgeships. We were personal friends of many years' standing and I was tremendously interested in anything that concerned him.

The day before this convention was held I was called to the office of Collector of Customs Leach in the old Federal Building. He asked me if I would cooperate with him in the nomination of the four judges. When I inquired whom he had in mind he showed me his list of four men. I returned it to him and said, "Change, cross out those names, or put Tom Kennedy's on, and I will go along with you."

He said: "That can't be done. Everything is already agreed on."

Maschke Forced Convention Deadlock.

I got a long time that I would see him at the convention, and proceeded to get busy. During my five years on the committee I had made a good many political friends and was on good terms with most of my colleagues. Besides, Judge Kennedy was a very popular person. So the next day when the convention got down to business we had the matter pretty well in hand.

After the names of the candidates were presented the vote began. Wards 1, 2, 3 and 4 first called, and voted solidly for Kennedy, and voted good support from delegates on the east and west sides of the river. A majority of the convention was necessary for a choice.

When the roll call was ended, it was found that no one had been nominated. Several roll calls were taken, without result, on each of which Kennedy made gains.

Then it became apparent to the "Federal Nephews" that their convention was tied up, so they rushed over and asked me to let up. I said: "Help me nominate Kennedy and I'll put the rest of your state through."

They refused, so we voted a few more times with no result, but with Kennedy gaining on every ballot.

Finally they came back to try for quarter, so we adjusted the matter by nominating Judge Kennedy and three of their selections.

The tremendous psychological advantage of solid block voting at the commencement of the balloting and the gain that Kennedy made on every vote was too much for the "Federal Nephews" to overcome.

Of the four men nominated that

Witnesses at Charter Hearing Air Widely Diverse Views.

Clevelanders favor and detest the city manager plan; they want a strong civil service and no civil service, they desire fewer councilmen or better paid councilmen.

The committee met on June 5, 1902, and I placed Mr. Howland's name in nomination. A majority rejected the proposal of the candidate and, instead, selected Mr. W. P. Abel.

From Washington, Mr. Burton promptly denounced the action of the committee and said that he would file charges of pernicious political activity against the federal office holders.

This statement ended with a bitter attack on the federal nephews for having disregarded the wish of the candidates.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.—(AP)—George Raft, sleek-haired film actor whose specialty on the screen is the portrayal of gangster and bull fighter roles, turned pugilist in real life today, planting a nose flattening punch during ten minutes of furious battle on Sam Satz.

More than 100 screen celebrities, tourists and autograph seekers witness the melee, which took place on a parking lot adjoining an exclusive Hollywood cafe.

The fight ended when a traffic officer, racing from his station at Vine Street and Hollywood Boulevard, separated the combatants, both of whom were bleeding profusely. Raft, was declared by witnesses to have been the victor, having scored four knockdowns.

REPLIES TO JOHNSON ON FREE PRESS

Journalism School Head Says Papers Must Fight.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, said tonight Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's Chicago speech was "a direct challenge to the press to lead the fight for freedom of public opinion."

Ackerman told a special meeting of the California Publishers Association that from the time the president signed the recovery act "Gen. Johnson has been fighting to control the press and substitute NRA-made opinion for public opinion."

"The men who drafted the law which gave the president power to license the press 'not only desired but expected to control the press,' he said. 'Furthermore, they intended to use the radio, which the government can license, to manufacture government opinion.'"

He charged Gen. Johnson a year ago believed he could "control the press and suppress public opinion," but said the fight of the publishers for press freedom in the newspaper code "deprived him of his opportunity to establish a dictatorship by law."

"Today Gen. Johnson seeks to accomplish the same objective by criticizing the press over the radio in the hope and with the expectation that he can undermine public confidence in news and substitute government opinion for public opinion," he continued.

THINK HITLER IS MOVING TO SEIZE THRONE

Observers Point to Similarity of Napoleon III Incident in 1852.

NAZIS PLAN FOR VOTE Use Hindenburg Death to Strengthen Position.

BY LOUIS F. LOCHNER, Associated Press Foreign Staff. BERLIN, Aug. 3.—The events of the last few days, coupled with an historical parallel, caused some observers to wonder tonight whether Germany is headed again toward monarchy—with Adolf Hitler on the throne instead of a Hohenzollern.

Hitler's assumption of the chief executive's powers and functions after the death of President Paul von Hindenburg and then demanding a plebiscite seemed strikingly in line with the practices of Napoleon III. On Nov. 7, 1852, Napoleon was elevated by the Senate from the presidency to the throne, and five days later a plebiscite put the stamp of popular approval on the action.

The association of ideas with Napoleon put the thoughts of some speculative minds on this question: Is the presidency of Hitler (even though he hasn't the title) but the forerunner of a "volkskaisertum" or rule by the people's kaiser, who in this Nazi dominated state could be no other than Hitler himself?

That the plebiscite will result in overwhelming approval of the action of Hitler in assuming the presidential functions in addition to those of reichs chancellor was taken for granted throughout the country. At the same time von Hindenburg's death, like many previous tragedies and crises, was turned into excellent political capital by the Nazis.

In life the old field marshal was a check on many Hitlerite plans; in death he became the Nazi orator's greatest Nazi of them all. The passing of von Hindenburg was followed quickly by the administration to the army, navy and air.

CHEERED AS HE ENDS 33-DAY TRIP ABROAD

Asserts Coast Country Must Make Room for Crowded Families.

BONNEVILLE, Ore., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Returning to the continent after a sea vacation, President Roosevelt in an address here today said the government would use its great river development projects as "yardsticks" on electrical power costs.

At the site of the $31,000,000 Bonneville Dam project, one of two great federal undertakings on the Columbia River, Mr. Roosevelt envisioned the deepening of the stream to permit ocean-going traffic as far as the Dalles, Ore., and said barge navigation eventually might be extended far into Washington and Idaho.

The president referred to the northwest, in which he was just starting an inspection trip, as a potential future homeland for people now in overcrowded places or an outworn land.

Government Creates Yardsticks. "The power that we are developing here is going to be power which for all time is going to be controlled by the government," the chief executive said.

He recalled that when he was in Portland as a "youngster" two years ago he said the principle of government needed "yardsticks so that people in this country will know whether they are paying the proper price for the electricity of our times."

"I conceived the idea that the government could create yardsticks," he continued. "One already has been started on the Colorado River (Boulder Dam). Two other yardsticks have been undertaken—the Tennessee and the Columbia, and the fourth—the St. Lawrence—is going to be started."

The president referred also to old age benefits and unemployment insurance as future possibilities when he said: "Out here you've not only got space—you've got space that can be used by human beings. A land already peopled by Americans who know whither America is bound. People who are thinking about advantages for mankind. Good education, some play, and above all a chance for the people to live their own lives without wondering what is going to happen tomorrow; see."

Avast There! Here's Odyssey of an Ore Boat

Depicting Romance of Sailing on Lake Erie

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of two stories describing a trip across Lake Erie on an ore boat.

BY RALPH KELLY. Mazes of lights lay upon the dark waters of the Detroit River a few nights ago as the Louis W. Hill, an M. A. Hanna Co. freighter, moved down it toward Lake Erie with ore for Buffalo. The lights were white and green and red. Some outlined dark masses rising from the water or from the river banks; some seemed to float in the air by themselves.

Capt. Gams D. Tullian, master of the Hill, spat in the pilot house spout and turned back to the center pilot house window to examine the lights again through binoculars.

The captain spoke to the wheelman behind him, silent, motionless in body, arms constantly moving as they spun the gleaming brass wheel. "Port a little, John."

The prow of the Hill moved to the left. Through the rear pilot house windows the great bulk of the Hill could be seen as a long diagonal, patiently sliding along behind the pilot house. It was midnight; but three deckhands were on their knees on the deck painting the side of one of the 22 hatches. The attitudes of their bodies had none of the independence of motion that was shared with sailors. They worked as any factory hand who has the eye of a boss upon him.

Second Mate John Gallagher, an attentive and bulky shadow, to the left of the captain stared at the lights, but before he could speak the problem had solved itself. "That fellow" had come out of a slip on the Detroit side of the river but whatever his ambitions with regard to the channel his speed was not great enough. As the Hill passed it the cluster of lights became a larger freighter, a milky froth at its bow, a stream of water flowing from a stern porthole.

ASSAILS NEW DEAL 'INCONSISTENCIES'

Fess at Toledo Rips Into Recovery Policies, Raps Roosevelt on Pledges.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Senator Simon D. Fess of Yellow Springs, seeking to succeed himself as Ohio's Republican member in the United States Senate, cataloged his list of "inconsistencies in the New Deal" in a talk here tonight.

The 72-year-old former president of Antioch College declared that "on the one hand, the government is urging farmers to cut their hog and cotton production and to make marginal lands out of cultivation, and on the other hand the administration has had Congress appropriate $101,000,000 to increase productivity of marginal land through irrigation and reclamation."

Senator Fess emphasized that despite President Roosevelt's campaign pledge of "no new taxes," the administration had taken steps to increase the purchasing power of the dollar.

Furthermore, Fess said, President Roosevelt had cut 25,000 federal employees to the pay roll and had created 52 commissions, more than any other president in history. "In the face of a pledge to cut federal expenditures, one billion dollars by eliminating bureaus and commissions," he said.

Vorys Takes Crack at the New Deal, Too.

STURBEVILLE, O., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Existence of contradictory policies within the New Deal was charged by John M. Vorys of Columbus, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator in a speech here tonight.

"One phase of the New Deal finds the government in its renegeing plans disregarding the principles laid down in its own securities act," he asserted. "If a company handles its financing as the government does, it would find itself in deep trouble."

Earlier in the day, the candidate in a Zanerich speech accused Postmaster General James A. Eads of "building up a national tammany."

Brown Brands Rival Party as "Unfaithful."

Plain Dealer Special.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 3.—Changes in the policy of the Division of Conservation were demanded by Clarence J. Brown, Republican gubernatorial candidate, tonight in a rally attended by about 500 persons.

"I propose that the fees paid into the conservation department be used for the purpose for which they are intended," Brown said.

Brown devoted the major portion of his address to public utilities and taxes. He demanded revision of the public utility laws of Ohio to insure prompt settlement of rate cases and destruction of "the Democratic machine built up at Columbus."

The Democratic party in Ohio has been unfaithful to the trust imposed in it by the voters," he charged.

"I built a gigantic political machine, with which it is endeavoring to control the Democratic primary in August and which will be used in an effort to control the election in November."

Morgan Flays Bank Lobbyists, Employers.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Daniel E. Morgan, former Cleveland city manager, charged his motor tour of Jefferson County today with a speech here tonight in behalf of his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

His prepared address denounced "unscrupulous bank lobbyists and the banking interests that employ them" and said "the people of Ohio have lost all confidence in the integrity of the State Banking Department."

He called for a revision of the banking code and new legislation to increase the authority of the state department.

The candidate listed among recommended revisions in the code an increase in the number of bank examiners, full publicity for results and findings of examinations, truthful bank statements as to their condition, greater liquidity of banks through observance of legal requirements, and adequate supervision and control of more rigid standards for approval of security for collateral loans.

Newspapers' Backing Draws Sparks' Fire.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—(AP)—C. Nelson Sparks of Akron, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, tonight assailed newspaper endorsements of Daniel E. Morgan, one of his opponents, in a speech prepared for delivery over the radio here.

An Ohio newspaper chain was the target of Sparks' attack.

"The citizens of the state are asking just what motivated the newspapers in endorsing Mr. Morgan and the Republic in endorsing when their Cleveland member refused to endorse him as a candidate for mayor of Cleveland because of the boss grip of the city under Mr. Morgan's city management," Sparks said.

Change Relief Setup, Is Harrison's Demand.

Plain Dealer Special.

ALLIANCE, O., Aug. 3.—Charging that the military setup for emergency relief in Ohio had resulted in careless and expensive handling of funds, Frank G. Harrison of Millcreek, candidate for Republican nomination for governor, here tonight told several hundred persons at a party rally that administration of relief should be entrusted to the hands of township trustees.

Harrison said the State Tax Commission had been the chief offender in using emergency relief tax collections for patronage purposes.

Ohio Aged Crucified, Elden Tells Findlay.

FINDLAY, O., Aug. 3.—(AP)—John A. Elden of Cleveland, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, asserted here tonight that the aged and infirm of Ohio are crucified upon the cross of politics.

"Respecting the people's solemn mandate that those reaching the sunset should be cared for to the extent of having been necessities purchased with aid not to be repaid," he said, "they now are demanding that applicants for this assistance state the City Council a Democrat. The ordinance threw both of those men into the new Ninth Ward and they appeared each other for election.

Jack McClain had diligently cultivated his constituents during his two years of service. We went about a great deal together, attended all the meetings, gave the papers and gatherings of all kinds among the various groups in the ward and so he had greatly enlarged his circle of friends and had become a very popular congressman.

But Mr. Johnson, in an effort to elect Dillon, made use of my influence that the city administration could bring out against the downtown population. He sent his lieutenants to every saloon in the ward and to everyone who had been favored by the city government. The word went out that McClain must be defeated.

I realized the danger and spent most of my time working for our congressman. The contest was the most spirited one in the city. When the vote was counted, it was revealed that while the ward went for Mr. Johnson by over 250 votes, Jack McClain won Dillon by the narrow margin of nine votes.

During the day of that election word came to me that one of my lieutenants had been arrested and was then locked up at Central Penitentiary. I sent a friend down to find him out. When he was released he came up to my office to tell me that someone had reported that he had paid out money to one of the workers at his precinct; that the man had pointed down on him and thrown him in jail.

Now, I had given him the money and felt responsible for his predicament. I was sent to the penitentiary to see what had happened. I asked for an interview with City Solicitor Newton D. Baker, who, by virtue of his office, was chief prosecutor in the Police Court. With high regard for the man, I explained the matter to Mr. Baker's satisfaction. I met him in his office at the police station.

I told him that the man was one of my lieutenants, was sent to the penitentiary by me with money I gave him with strict instructions that it was to be used to pay his workers, and that he had assured me that he had paid out the money to the letter.

Mr. Baker said: "Well, Mr. Maschke, that is just what he was arrested for, for spending money at an election."

"But, Mr. Baker," I said, "He spent the money to pay a worker."

"Don't you know that it is an offense to spend money at an election for any purpose?" said Mr. Baker, and then he pulled down a law book and read me a statute which made it an offense for any candidate or any agent, or committee, or any person, to pay or contribute or spend any money in order to secure a nomination or an election.

"That is a new one on me, Mr. Baker. I never knew that before," I said. "Every one in politics has broken that law. I have many times," he said. Charles Allen, and Tom L. Johnson."

"Not Mayor Johnson!" said Mr. Baker, indignantly.

"Yes, Mayor Johnson," I replied. "When you go back to the City Hall ask him and he will tell you so."

Then he talked with me at some length about political corruption and the use of money in campaigns. He expressed a strong desire to begin a crusade to purify political conditions, and added:

"Mr. Maschke, you are just the man I am looking for to help me. I answered: 'No, Mr. Baker, I am not your man. My first concern is to help this man out of the trouble I got him into.'"

Mr. Baker insisted on going forward with the case and presented it personally, but, happily, my lieutenant was acquitted in court. Not many years after this, our election laws were changed and this statute, which had been more honored in the breach than in the observance, was repealed. Today, while the law limits the amount candidates may spend, there is a specific provision that committees may spend $15 per precinct for canvassing and checking the vote on election day.

Tomorrow, Herman Baehr comes on the scene.

reality or by implication are absolutely and unambiguously false."

Davey's statement was given out in Cleveland yesterday after Davey had announced that he was going to "blow the lid" off the charges that he was sympathetic to the Ku Klux Klan and had corresponded with Coleseott over the question of obtaining Klan support. Copies of letters alleged to have been written by Davey to Coleseott and Coleseott to Davey have been reproduced in newspapers in Cincinnati and Dayton.

"I make the following charges based on reliable information," Davey asserted in his statement. "The White Klan leader, James A. Coleseott is hungry for money. For several months he has been trying persistently to get money out of me and failed completely. Each time I have refused to give him money he has attempted to invade my hotel headquarters in a futile effort to get money."

"I charge that he is on the payroll of my opponents and is conspiring with them to deliberately frame me."

"In 1930 Coleseott supported White and Peck. In 1932 he supported White and Sawyer."

"I make the further charge that Coleseott has been given a large amount of state business by the White administration in return for past favors. I make the further charge that he is now on the payroll of the White administration also."

"I never received the letter which was alleged to have been sent to me by Coleseott. Its publication proves its falsity. I call attention to the obvious fact that Coleseott's signature, as published, was an original, written on the letterhead of the Klan. If it had been sent to me, it could not have been secured without stealing it from my files. The truth is that it never came to my office. The best proof of this is the fact that the photographic reproduction shows that the letter was not folded and therefore never was inserted in an envelope. This alleged letter from Coleseott is a deliberate forgery."

"The alleged letter from me to Coleseott is a fraud and the signature is a forgery. I call attention to the obvious fact that my alleged signature is badly smeared and illegible, while the signature of Coleseott on his alleged letter is perfectly reproduced. Someone secured a letterhead of the Davey Co., and wrote the alleged letter from me, but was careful to make my signature illegible so that he could not be prosecuted for forgery."

"These alleged letters are part of a base conspiracy between my opponents and Coleseott and the leaders of the Ohio gang that seek, by this kind of dirty politics, to represent me unfairly to the people of Ohio."

"The letter alleged to have been written by Davey to Coleseott, dated April 16, exposed the desire to get together for a visit. The letter alleged to have been written by Coleseott to Davey, dated May 4, asked Davey's stand on the question of state aid for parochial schools and referred to a conference between Davey and Coleseott at a Columbus hotel. It stated the Klan soon would make its headquarters and refer the matter to support given by this organization to Davey in his 1932 campaign."
